

Valentino's Displays bolster British manufacturing with Kian Nets acquisition

Retail display specialists Valentino's Displays have completed the acquisition of the net basket manufacturer, Kian Nets.

The acquisition will see Kiannets.co.uk moving their offices to begin operating under the Valentino's Displays banner. The move will also see Valentino's Displays expand manufacturing at its Hampshire base using high-quality UK fabrics and British components. All will be stitched with care and attention in house to supply customers around the country. Additional product lines are expected to be introduced later this year

Net bags have become a popular alternative to the traditional plastic shopping basket for retailers and are increasingly in use on the high street thanks to their cost-effective production, easy storage and lightweight nature. With its increased capacity, Valentino's Displays will produce an array of net basket sizes, ranging from the popular smaller 8" diameter model right up to a much larger 16" version.

For retailers with special requirements, custom colours, shapes and sizes can also be manufactured in Hampshire for worldwide delivery. Screen printing is also on offer, meaning that all net bags can now be embellished with a company logo should the retailer wish.

Antonio Valentino, Valentino's Displays managing director said, "We are extremely pleased to announce the merger of Kian Nets with Valentino's Displays. We decided to grow our practice through a merger because we believe that a larger organisation will allow us to provide a wider array of products to our customers. As a British manufacturer, it was also important to us to retain the manufacturing of these products here in the UK, to support local jobs and ensure we're able to consistently supply a high quality product to our customers.
